PETROGRAD READY TO FALL; LENIN'S POWER IS ENDED

Reports To Paris Indicate Bolshevism In Russia Is Tottering

ULTIMATUM GIVEN

Entente Orders German Troops Out Of Lettland And Lithuania

WARSHIPS CLASH

British And Bolsheviki Naval Units Meet In Gulf Of Finland

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, May 28.—It is authoritatively declared that news from Russia indicates the influence of Lenin is completely ended and there will practically be no opposition to the capture of Petrograd.

Ultimatum Is Given

London, June 2.—The Entente has delivered an ultimatum that the German troops in Lettland and Lithuania must be withdrawn to a certain line.

Decisive Stage Reached

Copenhagen, May 27.—The Bolshevists offered tenacious resistance to the fighting preceding the fall of Pskoff. Forty machine-guns were captured.

Pskoff, which is the junction of five railways, is the strategical backbone of the Bolshevist campaign against Esthonia and its capture indicates that a decisive stage has been reached.

In further successes on the Southwest front, the Esthonians occupied Statskeln, on the Valk-Wolmar Railway, and captured Salismunde, on the Gulf of Riga.

Naval Engagement

London, June 2.—There has been a naval engagement in the Gulf of Finland between British and Bolshevik warships. The Bolsheviki fled to Kronstadt.

BOLSHEVIKI IN SIBERIA GAIN IN UFA SECTOR

Believed In Harbin Arrival Of New Division Will Check Their Advance On City

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Harbin, June 3.—Reuter's Agency is reliably informed that the capture of Sterlitomak by the Bolsheviki and the retreat of the Government troops in the Ufa sector is not of great significance.

The arrival of General Volkoff's division has already improved the situation and doubt of the Bolshevik advance towards Ufa will be checked in the near future.

The news that prelimmary steps had been taken towards the acknowledgement of the Omsk Government has caused a gradual improvement in the local financial situation. The prices, however, of goods of first necessity are still high despite the fact that the rouble is steadily improving.

The Chinese merhcants are beginning to accept Siberian bank notes but still at a considerable discount.

FRENCH INSTITUTE SENDS MEN TO PARIS FROM U.S.

Trade In Raw Materials That France Produces To Be Studied By Mission

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, May 28.—An American mission organised by the French Institute in the United States has arrived in Paris. The object of the visit of the mission is to ascertain what articles, either in their raw state or manufactured France and her colonies could sell in the United States. The Institute wishes to bring about closer co-operation between the two countries.

Commander Of Rainbow Division Photographed In Germany

Major-General C.A.F. Flagert

Major-General C. A. F. Flagler, Commander of the Forty-second (Rainbow) Division, photographed at Ahrweiler, Germany, where the division had its headquarters during its occupation of the Rhineland. General Flagler is dear to the whole nation inasmuch as he commands units from nearly every State in the Union. Several units of the famous division have already arrived in the United States. The remainder are still maintaining order along the Rhine and are expected to return home shortly.

Ministers At Peking Plan To Advise China To End Civil Strife

American Representative To Bring Question To Notice Of Government

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 3.—Friendly advice to China for a reconciliation between the North and South and the unification of the national administration has been decided upon at conferences of the ministers representing Japan, America, Great Britain and France in Peking.

It is expected that this advice will be presented to the Chinese through the American Minister on June 5.

Italian Honors Given To Chinese Officials

Order Of Chevalier Knight Of Crown Conferred On Three Here By King

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Shanghai, June 4.—The King of Italy has been pleased to confer on Mr. S. K. Chen, Secretary of the Bureau of Foreign Affairs, Magistrate Kwan, of the Mixed Court and Magistrate Yuen, Assistant Magistrate of the Mixed Court, the order of Chevalier Knight of the Crown of Italy.

Strikers In France Demand 8-Hour Day

Workers Quit In Engineering Industries In Paris And In Nord Coal Mines

(French Wireless To Reuter)

Paris, June 3.—(Via Koukaza).—The demand for an eight-hour day has caused strikes in the engineering industries in Paris and in the coal mines of the Nord.

Sharper Restrictions Imposed In Berlin

Martial Law Is More Strictly Enforced As Government Anticipates Trouble

London, June 3.—Anticipating trouble, the German Government has proclaimed stricter enforcement of martial law in Berlin and has prohibited the holding of meetings.

Shanghai Students Get Word Of Arrest Of 400 In Peking And Protest In Demonstration

Drastic Measures To Check Strike And Boycott Movements Taken By Government---Nine Are In Custody In Hongkong

About 400 students were arrested in Peking at a meeting yesterday morning of the anti-Japanese demonstrators, according to a telegram received by the local Students' Union from the Tientsin branch.

The accused were immediately rushed to the College of Translation, the Yi Hsueh Kwan, and confined there under armed guards. Two of them were whipped, it is stated, fast fettered and shackled and then jailed.

The message also alleges cruel treatment of the arrested, who, it is said, were deprived of their food and subjected to ill-treatment. In spite of the wholesale suppression, the message said, the students are active as ever and are bravely fighting for their brothers in face of similar treatment.

Demonstration Is Held

After the news was received three hundred or more students of Shanghai City held a demonstration in front of the Modern Theater, Chiu Mur Tien, last night to protest against the treatment of the Peking students by the Chinese authorities. The military police had the matter well in hand, and no serious trouble or arrests were reported.

Representatives of the union called on the Nantao Chamber of Commerce yesterday but were admitted only after great difficulties were put in their way by the police. They found that over 30 military police were on duty and they were allowed to see neither the chairman nor the vice-chairman.

After waiting in the hall for more than 10 minutes, a notice signed by the chairman was posted on the wall to the effect that the Chamber could not act upon a request that had been made to close stores generally as its meeting scheduled to take place yesterday was called off by the local authorities. The representative left without getting any satisfaction.

The local union has issued a call to the students in the different provinces to rescue their suffering friends in the North.

Reuter's carries a message that nine student strikers have been arrested in Hongkong by the British authorities.

Nine Held In Hongkong

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, June 4.—The police have arrested nine Chinese youths who were engaged in a demonstration in support of an anti-Japanese boycott.

Two New Student Papers Make Appearance Here

Two more student organs to promote the anti-Japanese movement made their appearance yesterday. One is the daily published by the striking students at St. John's University while the other is known as Nanyang, also a daily paper, issued by the Nanyang College branch of the Students' Union.

The Postal Commissioner of Shanghai yesterday issued an order instructing his subordinates to accept Japanese bank notes when they are presented for the purchase of stamps of money orders. The commissioner said that if the notes could not be exchanged for cash, his office will see that they are honored.

That the Allied nations will have as much to lose as China will if Japan is allowed to continue her aggrandisement on this country was the keynote of an appeal issued yesterday by the local commercial, educational and social service organisations to the British, American, General, French and Italian Chambers of Commerce and the China Association. The message follows:

On behalf of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, the Association of College Presidents, the Kiangsu Provincial Educational Association, the World's Chinese Students' Federation, the Chinese Y.M.C.A., the Chinese Overseas Merchants' Federation, the American Returned Students' Club, the Shanghai Chinese Students' Union, the National Peace Society, the [illegible] Peace Association and the Chinese Christian Union, we, the undersigned committee, have the honor to lay before you a matter of great importance to China as well as to Allied interests in the Far East.

Refers To Shantung Decision

The Paris Conference has decided the Shantung question in favor of Japan. It is reported that the reasonableness and justice of China's claim was not denied but the Powers had to act as they did on account of the promises made to Japan in time of national danger.

The decision of the Paris Conference has so far produced these

FEELING HIGH AGAINST AMERICANS IN SHANTUNG

Obstacles Placed In Their Way By Japanese, Especially In Case Of Missionaries

An American traveler just returned from Tsingtau confirms reports that the Japanese authorities in Tsingtau have closed one of the mission schools there, supposedly for encouraging anti-Japanese feeling. He also confirmed that a middle school had been closed in the same city, although its students were all children barely old enough to understand what the agitation is all about, and the teacher banished for three years.

The reports of unpleasantnesses forced on Americans, especially American missionaries traveling in territory controlled by Japan, also were found to be true. As many obstacles as possible are being placed in the way of Americans and feeling is high. This man, himself one of the best known missionaries in China, was submitted to numerous indignities and inconveniences while his ship was in port in Tsingtau. His luggage was minutely searched, with considerable discourtesy, he was treated as a suspicious character although his American passport bore a Japanese vise, and he was shadowed every minute of the time the ship was in port, so that he did not even think it worth while to go on shore. And no explanation of this conduct was vouchsafed him by the Japanese officials responsible for it.

HAWKER'S AEROPLANE SALVED BY STEAMER

Word Received American Ship Is Proceeding To Falmouth With Mails And Machine

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

St. John's May 27.—The liner Sachem has arrived and reports receiving a wireless message from the American steamer Lake Charterville saying that she has found Hawker's aeroplane in the mid-Atlantic, salved the mail aboard of the aeroplane and part of the machine itself and is taking them to Falmouth, England.

Throngs Greet Hawker

London, May 28.—On Lieutenant Hawker's arrival in London the crowds in the streets were unequalled since Armistice Day. Dense masses filled the thoroughfare, whereupon Lieut. Hawker descended from the carriage, mounted a constable's horse and slowly pushed his way forward, completing the journey to the Aero Club riding bareheaded on horseback.

The Australians acting as an escort to Commander Grieve linked hands and cleared a way by main force. Similar scenes of enthusiasm were enacted along the whole route through Portland Place, Langham Place and Regent Street to the Aero Club. Dominion soldiers used lamp standards throughout the route as seats.

Carried Through Crowd

In New Burlington Street Lieut. Hawker was lifted from the horse and carried shoulder-high, inch by inch, into the Club. Commander Grieve was then only just arriving at this street, and ultimately he likewise was carried the last stage of the journey.

Ruin Of Famous Belgian Cathedral Viewed By American Congressmen

U.S. Congressmen visit Ypres

Members of the United States Congressional Mission to devastated regions of Belgium and France, in specting the ruins of the famous old Cathedral of Ypres. Nothing is left of the once beautiful edifice but piles of dirt and debris. It is said that the ruins will be left standing as a monument to the frightful destruction wrought by the Germans during their occupation of the territory.

CHARGE PISTOL WIELDER WITH MURDER ATTEMPT

F. W. Golding Appears In Police Court To Answer Complaint Of Cafe [illegible]

F. W. Golding, a stenographer in the employ of the law firm of White-Cooper, Master and Harris, appeared before Mr. F. A. Robinson in the British Police Court yesterday morning on the charge of attempting to murder Ernest Blas, manager of the Astor Grill rooms. Golding was further charged with violation of the Municipal bye-law regarding the carrying of a revolver.

Mr. G. H. Wright appeared to prosecute the case and Mr. N. C. Home represented the defendant.

The story of the attempted shooting, which occurred last Friday night, was told by Mr. Blas. He stated that Golding entered the Grill at about 9 p.m., accompanied by two men named Langley and Smith. They went to one of the small upstairs dining rooms and shortly after there were sounds of a commotion, as of chairs and dishes being thrown about. Witness said that on going to the room he found Langley trying to separate the other two, Golding, who appeared to be the aggressor, trying to strike Smith. The witness tried to catch hold of Golding, who fought him off. He then persuaded Smith to leave the place, following him to the street door, and then went back upstairs and requested Golding to leave. The defendant threatened to "lick" the manager, who proceeded to pull him to the door, assisted by Mr. Eddie, the proprietor, and several of the Chinese boys.

Blas stated that he took Golding to the curb, turned him loose and told him to go home and behave himself, whereupon the ejected youth swore at him and threatened to give his ejector a licking. In order to protect himself the manager slapped his assailant, who stumbled to the ground, then got up and, with further profanity, declared that he was going home to get a gun and would come back and kill the witness.

About twenty or twenty-five minutes later, the witness stated, one of the boys shouted "that trouble man have come back" and he saw a man pass through the passageway into the side dining room. He went into the passageway and had reached the middle of the passage when Golding came swiftly out of the side dining room with a revolver in his hand. Before witness realised what was happening Golding had stuck the revolver against his abdomen and fired. Witness simultaneously made a quick turn sideways and grabbed the weapon. He felt the heat of the shot and thought he had been hit and he found that the bullet had ripped three holes through his coat, while his shirt was badly powder burned. The witness identified the shirt in court and also his handkerchief, which had been in his inside coat pocket and

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT TO DEAL WITH STRIKE

Commons At Ottawa Is Told By Premier That Law And Order Must Be Preserved

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Ottawa, May 27.—In the House of Commons today the Premier Sir Robert Borden, made a statement concerning the Labor unrest. He pointed out that a Royal Commission is at present investigating labor conditions. Meanwhile the Government is determined that law and order shall be maintained and the public services must not be dislocated under conditions such as obtain in Winnipeg.

Postal and other employes must carry on or abandon the service permanently. The sympathetic strike of postal employes in Calgary and Winnipeg, he said, is indefensible.

KOLTCHAK GOVERNMENT NOT YET RECOGNISED?

Reuter Message Says Britain, France And Japan Are Still Considering It

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, May 28.—Great Britain, France and Japan are ready to recognise the Koltchak Government, Great Britain demanding concession rights; France insisting that the Russian debt be assumed, and Japan insisting that the railroad concessions and fisheries arrangements with the old Russian Empire be perpetuated.

[Edit. note.—This telegram is difficult to understand. The message received by French wireless a week ago, dated five days before this, said that the Allies had already agreed to recognise the Koltchak Government simultaneously and that they had done so. Possibly the wireless message was changed in transmission.]

NC-4 ENDS ITS FLIGHT UNDER CLEAR SKIES

Stop Overnight At Lisbon Made By American Before Going On To Plymouth

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, May 28.—A message from Ponta Delgada states that Commander Read of the NC-4 started in a cloudless sky. He declared he would remain at Lisbon overnight and proceed to Plymouth on Wednesday morning.

The course from the Azores to Portugal is marked by fourteen destroyers.

ALLIES TO INVADE GERMANY IF TERMS ARE NOT ACCEPTED

If Treaty Is Unsigned By End Of June Forces Will Move, Paris Hears

PLANS OUTLINED

Will Cross Border From West And North Or From Baltic

INTENTION STATED

Berlin Will Be Occupied If Move Is Made, It Is Announced

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 2.—It is authoritatively stated in Paris that if the Treaty is unsigned by the end of June, Germany will be instantly invaded from the west and north or from the Baltic and peace will not be accepted until Berlin has been occupied.

Plans For Advance

Paris, May 28.—General Fayolle, Commander of the two French Armies of Occupation, has arrived at Coblenz for a hurried conference with General Liggett on emergency plans for an advance if the Germans should not sign the Peace terms.

Fears of the Allied advance increase daily throughout western Germany.

Correction In Treaty

London, June 2.—In Part III of the summary of the Austrian Peace Terms, under the heading "The Frontiers of Austria" the second sentence should read "The southern frontier facing Italy is to follow the watershed between the Inn and the Drave on the north and the Lombardy rivers on the south, passing Col Du Brenner and including the Stetten Valley in Italy. That facing the Serbo-Croat-Slovene State is to be fixed by the principal Allied and Associated Powers at a later date."

The rest of Part II remains as telegraphed.

Study Counter-Proposals

(French Wireless To Reuter)

Paris, June 3.—(Via Koukaza).—President Wilson this morning studied the German counter-proposals with Mr. Lloyd George.

In the afternoon the Council of Four examined the reports of the commissions which are consulting regarding the counter-reply.

The Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the five Great Powers heard M. Karnetek, the Special Plenipotentiary appointed by Holland, on the subject of an agreement to intervene in Belgium for the revision of the common frontiers of the two countries.

JOURNEY TO NEW YORK CAN BE MADE IN 21 DAYS

Trans-Canada Limited Crosses Continent In Less Than Four Days

It is now possible to travel from Shanghai to New York City in three weeks. The local offices of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services yesterday received cable notification of the inauguration of a daily train which makes the run from Vancouver to Montreal in 92 hours and 15 minutes.

It is known as the Trans-Canada Limited. The regular Imperial Limited which crosses Canada in five full days will be continued. The new service became effective on June first.

The cross-country journey of 2,890 miles is thus made in less than four days. The running time from Montreal to New York is ten hours. Empress liners reach Vancouver 15 days after leaving Shanghai and the local agency of the C.P.O.S. allow three weeks for the journey to allow for delays in connections. The Trans-Canada Limited will connect with the express a fast train leaving Montreal for New York.

Because of the new train, it will be possible to travel from Vancouver to New York via Montreal in less time than via Chicago.

Amir Dodging Blame For War Orders That Fighting End

Letter From Amanulla To Afghan Commander Takes Stand British Started Trouble

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Simla, June 1.—An official communique states that a letter dated May 28 from the Amir Amanulla addressed to the Viceroy and asking for a cessation of hostilities has been received at Peshawar. Its arrival at Simla is awaited.

The following certified copy of the Amir's order to the Commander of the Afghan Eastern Army, (and presumably to the other commanders) attached to the letter begins:

"May it be known to our exalted and dignified brother Dost Muhammed Khan, the civil and military Naib Salar of the Eastern Side:

"According to information received by us these days from the exalted Government of India, it appears that fighting has taken place between the troops of the two sides owing to some misunderstanding.

Orders Fighting To End

"You should suspend hostilities until the door of discussion and communication is opened as we had no intention of fighting with this old friend of ours and were obliged to take defensive measures. Now that he desires peace, we order and command you to keep back your regular troops, the tribes and Mujahidin Grazis, for whom we are liable and responsible, with your masterly efforts and to wait for further orders.

"You should, however, keep in view the defensive and offensive preparations. If the result of the discussion between Your Sublime Government and the Illustrious British Government is the conclusion of peace or otherwise, I shall inform you.

"I—that is to say, you—should suspend action until further orders.

"Dated, May 27, 1919.

"Amir Amanulla."

Regarding Bolshevik activity, an intercepted wireless message from Tashkent to Moscow, dated April 24, runs:

"A bureau for Mussulman Communists was established at Tashkent on March 30.

"(1) The aim of this organisation is the union of all those who work for the Communist Party.

"(2) Propaganda, the issue of literature and suborning of Mussulmen to the Communist Party.

"(3) The covening of a conference of Mussulmen to decide all questions concerning the Communist Party and to work in connection with it.

"We realise it is a matter of great difficulty to gain these aims owing to the small number of Mussulman Communists and socialism not being readily adaptable to Mussulman ideas, so we must proceed with great caution."

Attacks Faint Hearted

Simla, June 2.—Reuter's special correspondent says that Nadir Khan, the Afghan commander in the Khost district, has entered the Waziristan Tribal territory by three routes with Afghan regulars and 36 guns. Their attacks on our posts are described as faint-hearted and failed to make any impression.

The enemy is content with long-distance sniping, evidently uncertain on which side the sympathy of the Waziris lies.

British Posts Intact

Simla, June 1.—Reuter's special correspondent at Peshawar, wiring today, reports:

Laskars continue to assemble in Waziristan. Except for certain points, which have been voluntarily abandoned, the British posts are intact. The Afghan nine-pounders have had very little destructive effect on Thal though it was been subjected to a bombardment for some days. There is no chance of the enemy reaching Bannu or Kohat. Our concentrations are proceeding rapidly.

The Afghan troops fled at Birkot before the victorious advance of the Chitralis.

The revolt of the Kaffirs is significant and it shows that the Amir's authority is waning.

The British authorities have imposed punitive measures on Utmanzai village, twenty miles from Peshawar, where the inhabitants were attempting a dangerous intrigue. All the agitators have been arrested. The incident has had a quieting effect on Peshawar.

Thal Front Quiet

Simla, May 30.—Thal is quiet. The enemy still occupy the adjacent hills. Our aeroplanes have severely damaged the enemy camp at Yusuf Khel, four miles above Thal.

There is no fresh news from Miranshah, where the presence of our troops is having a quieting influence on the Waziris and Mahsuds.

Firing has occurred against our posts in the Lower Tochi, notably at Idak.

In the action at Spin Baldak the enemy lost 170 officers and men killed and 169 taken prisoners. About 200 of the garrison broke out of the fort and fled but suffered heavily from our machine-gun fire and our cavalry, who pursued them.

A political officer has interviewed certain of the Mohmand jirgas and good relations have been established with the Shinwaris, who are returning to Bagh Khargali and undertaking, after gathering the harvest, to supply our camps.

From Landi Khana it is reported that a number of German and Austrian officers, formerly resident in Kabul, are now directing the Afghan operations. There is also a certain amount of Bolshevik co-operation and assistance.

Talk Of New Amir

Simla, May 30.—Reuter's special correspondent at Peshawar states that the Ghilzai tribe is not averse to the selection of a new Amir in succession to Amanulla, who is now described as a young visionary and the tool of unscrupulous persons.

That heat is seasonable and the health of the troops excellent.

Fighting Continuing

London, May 27.—The India Office states that the Government of India telegraphed on the 18th that the Afghan commander-in-chief's insolent message mentioned on the 16th was obviously devised in order to gain time.

The Amir has not replied to the invitation to address the Viceroy through the British commander and the Afghans are continuing offensive preparations on the whole frontier.

Tribes Remain Quiet

Simla, June 1.—The situation at Parachinar continues satisfactory. No further action by Nadir Khan is reported from Thal and there have been no new developments at Miranshah. Some Mahsud Lashkars are reported in the vicinity of Jandola, but the attitude of the Bhittanis, in whose country the post is located, is stated to be still satisfactory.

Further south near Murtaza a squadron of our cavalry rushed a party of 300 Waziris and Mahsuds who had ventured into the plains. Twenty were killed, five captured and several more wounded. Our casualties were eight men killed and wounded.

There is no change in the situation on the Dakka front. Reconnaissances and foraging expeditions are being carried out regularly by our cavalry.

Seistan, the district southwest of Afghanistan, is quiet and the leading men are offering to raise levies.

Students Get Word Of Peking Arrests

effects in China. It has caused great disappointment and indignation among the vast majority of the Chinese people. A serious boycott against the Japanese is being systematically organised everywhere and the students' strike all over China is stirring up the whole nation.

On the other hand, to a small but powerful group of the pro-Japanese militarists and politicians, the decision seems to give added courage and strength for further misconduct. They declare that the victory of Japan at the Paris Conference is not so much a triumph over China as over the Allies and that the result clearly shows that the Powers can not check Japan, for otherwise they would not have given a decision evidently against their own interests. Therefore, these politicians take the decision as a justification for their pro-Japanese policy and are now actively preparing for seizing the powers of the Government.

These are immediate, visible effects. What they may develop into it is hard to say, but the situation is certainly serious.

Ask For Guarantees

In view of this, the representatives of the aforesaid organisations have held a joint meeting at the Y.M.C.A. to consider the situation and the necessary measures to be taken. It is the opinion of the meeting that if it is impossible to get the Paris Conference to modify its decision, the great Powers should be requested to obtain for China effective guarantees from Japan for the return of Tsingtau and our rights in Shantung within a reasonable time on reasonable conditions instead of indefinite pledges of doubtful value which Japan has made from time to time. Accordingly a telegram was sent to President Wilson of the United States, Premier Lloyd-George of Great Britain and Premier Clemenceau of France and Premier Orlando in Italy, a copy of which we have the honor to enclose for your perusal and information.

It is also decided at the joint meeting of the said organisations that we should approach you with the request that the Allied Chambers of Commerce cable to Premier Lloyd George and other influential persons to similar effect. We venture to resort to this measure as we think you would agree with us that in this matter Allied and Chinese interests are identical, for Japan's possession of Tsingtau and other important rights in Shantung is not only a menace to China but also a danger to the Allies which have vast interests in the Far East.

As the Peace Treaty is reported to be signed soon, any early favorable action taken by the Allied Chamber of Commerce would be greatly appreciated by the Chinese people.

We have the honor to be,

Your obedient servants,

Returned Students Act

The American returned students yesterday addressed a telegraphic protest to the American Legation at Peking to be forward to President Wilson and the State Department at Washington against the decision of the Paris Conference to allow Japan to succeed the former German rights in Shantung. The message follows:

"Two hundred Shanghai American returned students mortified by peace conference proposal ceding to Japan without League of Nations guarantee of unconditional return to China her inalienable Shantung rights, protest that proposal emboldens sinister forces constantly undermining China and clamping open door of untrammelled trade against all non-Japanese—unless proposal be repudiated and other causa belli designed by Japan promptly rendered innocuous, they will indubitably encompass the Far East in deluge of death and destruction."

An acknowledgment of the receipt of the telegrams sent by Shanghai Chinese urging the Chinese peace delegates to Paris to fight for the return of Tsingtau was contained in a message received from Mr. C. T. Wang, one of the delegates to Mr. V. W. Zee, general secretary of the China Tract Society.

The message said in part:

"Your cablegram is greatly appreciated. We are led to do what we believe to be the right thing. The messages sent to us every day from home and our residents abroad are most encouraging to us."

Government Fails To Check Activity Of Peking Students

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, May 31.—The Peking students have issued their second White List, which contains the names of over 80 Chinese firms that manufacture equivalents and substitutes for Japanese goods. The list includes straw hats, toilet articles, underwear, leather boots and shoes, ink, paste, cloth, paper and various office supplies, and it has been circularised among all the retail and wholesale merchants of Peking with the request that they buy all future supplies from the manufacturers named in it.

Yesterday the Peking Higher Normal College was closed for the Summer holidays, and other schools are expected to shut down soon. Many students from all the schools and colleges here have already left for their homes, and the military authorities who control the city under martial law are beginning to hope that the students' movement may be solved in this manner without further difficulty or embarrassment to themselves and the Government. Representatives of the students' council state, however, that those students who have participated actively in the movement will either remain in Peking for the Summer or put themselves at the disposal of the council for service elsewhere. They say that the mere closing of all schools for the long vacation cannot interfere with their cause.

To Spread Propaganda

Representatives of the student body of Peking have been sent to every province in China to spread the word of awakening and liberty among the people. Other students are serving as regular bearers of despatches between here and Tientsin, as the students soon found out that all their mail matter was held up and censored by the police. Plans for the publication of a new students' newspaper, the Fourth of May, in Tientsin have been matured, and this sheet will appear from tomorrow on. A staff of editors is already on the job in Tientsin, and a regular courier service to Peking and other cities in the neighborhood has been arranged for.

A large body of Peking students, representing all branches of the big movement, is planning to go to Shanghai to co-operate with the student leaders there. The Peking students say that they will have more freedom at Shanghai, particularly with regard to holding meetings, and so Shanghai will henceforth be the main headquarters for all student activities. It has been highly difficult here for the students to organise themselves into working groups, as the police are "guarding" the Government University and Tsinghua College, the two leading schools, day and night; and the students have been forced to the utmost ingenuity in getting together to formulate plans. They feel that no such obstacles will be put in their way at Shanghai, and they likewise welcome the chance of joining the Shanghai student body, which is larger and more highly organised than their own.

Police Use Censorship

The police think that the entire student movement can be put down by suppressing publicity, and to this end they are holding up press telegrams to and from Peking, as well as censoring all press matter that goes through the mails. A high official in the Peking police stated at a Chinese dinner on Friday night that this was the definite policy of his service, and that there was every reason to hope that it would succeed in the end. He said that even press telegrams sent by foreign correspondents were held up until they had lost their news value, and that press news sent through mails censored rigidly.

The Chinese edition of the Peking and Tientsin Times recently published an editorial on this same subject, saying that the situation at Peking must be dark indeed, as for many days they had either not received their news agency services from the capital at all or had received only such news as had no bearing on the student movement and the domestic peace situation. With Peking under martial law there is nothing to prevent the military authorities from taking any action they please with regard to mail and telegraphic press messsages, but the two local press clubs, the United and the International, are contemplating a protest concerning the reckless way in which the Government is handling the news situation.

History Of Y.M.C.A. In China Told At Cornerstone Laying

Ceremony Held At Site Where New Building Is To Rise Attended By Prominent Officials

The ceremony of laying the cornerstone by the National Committee of the Y.M.C.A. at Hongkong and Museum Roads took place yesterday evening before a large number of prominent residents The placing of the stone was done by the Rev. A. P. Parker, first chairman of the national committee, and Dr. Fong F. Sec, present chairman of the committee. Speeches were made by Dr. Parker, Mr. S. K. Tsao, general secretary of the association and Dr. John Y. Lee, who also presided in absence of Mr. C. C. Nieh, who has been indisposed.

Mr. Francis Gill sang a vocal solo entitled "Fear Ye Not, O Israel" and a quartet consisting of Messrs. Gill, C. A. Siler, A. Rugh and C. D. Giauque sang a number of selections. The Rev. C Y. Cheng gave the invocation while the Rev. C. G. Sparham gave the benediction. Mr. Y. K. Woo read the Chinese inscriptions on the cornerstone and announced the contents of the iron box placed within the stone, which contained copies of THE CHINA PRESS the North China Daily News, the Shun Pao and the Eastern Times and various association publications and records of the association showing its development.

Traces Institution's History

Dr. Lee traced the growth of the association since its establishment 24 years ago and he spoke of the necessity of a National Committee building. He said that as early as 1910, the need of a building to house the central committee was felt. In response to the call for co-operation made by Mr. F. S. Brockman, the general secretary, he said.

"Mr. Stimson, a business man of Los Angeles, made a gift of G.$40,000 to purchase the land and Miss Helen Gould, now Mrs. F. J. Shepard, gave $50,000 for its erection. This amount, however, was not adequate to erect a building commensurate with the national committee's needs. Under the leadership of C. T. Wang a sum of more than Tls. 30,000 was raised in China. The gifts from America and China were sufficient to provide for the present building."

Dr. Parker expressed his satisfaction at being able to attend the joyous occasion. He said that when the association was started 24 years ago, he never expected that the association would have expanded so much during this short period.

Tells Of First Meeting

"In 1896," said Dr. Parker in part, "the first national committee meeting was held in my office in Shanghai and I became its first chairman. At first the organisation was not known as the Young Men's Christian Association, but the Young Disciples' Society. It was changed to its present name at a convention in Nanking. But those were days of few events.

"The work really began with the coming of Mr. D. Willard Lyon who arrived in Shanghai, October 5, 1895. Two years later Mr. Lyon wrote to the international committee that two secretaries would be needed for China, one for Tientsin and one for Shanghai. Within ten years twenty foreign secretaries arrived and the number has since risen to 108 with 240 Chinese secretaries.

"The Chinese membership in China is now 49,500. In the association schools are over 8,000 students. The operating expenses of the past year were $465,000 all of which was provided by friends of the association in China, the greater part through fees of members."

Opens Another Epoch

Mr. Tsao asserted that the laying of the cornerstone marks a new epoch of better and active service that China expects of the national committee of the Y.M.C.A. He said that the ceremony is one of twofold significance, one the unification of the work of religious, educational and physical aspirations of the association and the upholding of its principles, and the other the test offered by the silent witness, the building itself, showing whether or not the national committee is fulfilling its obligations.

The speaker stated that the Republic of China will look to the committee for assistance to furnish her with good citizens. The church will look to it for co-operation in the Christianising of China and the local associations will look to it for counsel and protection. Heretofore, in spite of the lack of facilities the national committee has established branches in all big cities. This, Mr. Tsao said, spelled sacrifice. Moreover, although the national committee serves in an advisory capacity, it assumes no control. Each association has its own board of directors to look after and govern the organisation.

The committee, he explained, is in constant touch with the church to work out harmoniously the ways to realise the kingdom of God. It has both city and student divisions of work and maintains a large publication department with a staff of Chinese editors, a well organised business department, a lecture department, and a department of secretarial training for the guidance and preparation of Chinese secretaries.

Cost Of Structure

The present portion of the building will cost Tls. 86,000 when completed. It will be five stories high with a total floor area of 20,300 square feet. It will be furnished throughout with modern heating and plumbing, electricity, intercommunicating automatic telephone system and up-to-date office furniture. The architects are Shattuck and Hussey and Mr. A. Q. Adamson, C. E., the secretary of construction.

The building committee for the National Building consists of the Rev. G. F. Fitch, Mr. C. C. Nieh, Mr. C. E. Stocker, Mr. J. H. Black, Mr. S. C. Chu, Mr. S. K. Tsao and A. Q. Adamson.

Among others present at the ceremony were Sir Havilland de Sausmarez, Judge of the British Supreme Court, Judge Charles S. Lobingier, of the United States Court for China, United States Consul-General Thomas Sammons, Captain W. H. Lunt, Dr. Frank Rawlinson, Dr. W. Hopkin Rees, United States Vice-Consul J. B. Sawyer and Dr. J. W. Lowrie.

Reconstruction And War's Aftermath

The Rise Of Nationality In The Balkans. By R. W. Seton-Watson. E. P. Dutton and Company. G. $5.

An account of the successive struggles of Balkan peoples for deliverance from Turkey and the establishment of the modern Balkan States. Dr. Seton-Watson is one of the leading British authorities in this field, the author of eight important books dealing with Balkan and Eastern European politics.

The Firebrand Of Bolshevism. By Princess Catherine Radziwill. Boston: Small, Maynard and Company. G. $2.

A connected account, from a Russian viewpoint, of the German spy plots that culminated in Russia's withdrawal from the war.

One Year At The Russian Court. By Renee Elton Maud. John Lane Company. G. $3.

A young Englishwoman's observations of the Court of the Tsar during the period of the Russo-Japanese war. Mrs. Maud had many Russian relatives in the government and full opportunities to study the imperial family and those who surrounded them.

Ivan Speaks. By Thomas Whittemore. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin Company. G. 75 cents.

A translation from the Russian of sayings overheard by a Russian nurse working among soldiers at the front during the first three years of the war. These utterances afford an unconscious revelation of the Russian mind.

The Diary Of A German Soldier. By Feldwebel C ———. Alfred A. Knopf. G. $1.50.

A volume of curious documentary interest; originally written in French by a German non-commissioned officer, and published at Paris last year. The writer seems to have been a man of unusual intelligence, and in everything but name to have enjoyed the prestige of a commissioned officer. His writings have no special literary value, but are interesting as a frank and unpretentious narrative of events during the first two years of the war. His book is noteworthy as a confirmation of many of the charges of German brutality.

Fighting Germany's Spies. By French Strother. Doubleday, Page and Company. G. $1.50.

A revelation of the propagandist campaign started in this country by Von Bernstorff and his aides. Mr. Strother relates the activities of several of the best known German spies at work in this country, and his facts and documents have been verified through the Department of Justice at Washington. Much of the material is now given for the first time in connected and related form.

The Eagle's Eye. By William J. Flynn and Courtney Riley Cooper. Prospect Press. G. $1.50.

A story of the late Imperial German Government's spies and intrigues in America, as told by the retired Chief of the United States Secret Service, and "novelised" by Courtney R. Cooper.

Religion And The War. Edited by E. Hershey Sneath. Yale University Press. G. $1.

A group of noteworthy essays by members of the faculty of the Yale School of Religion. These are some of the topics: "Moral and Spiritual Forces in the War," by Dean Charles R. Brown; "The Ministry and the War," by Henry Hallam Tweedy; "Foreign Missions and the War, Today and Tomorrow," by Harlan P. Beach; "The War and Social Work," by William B. Bailey; "The War and Church Unity," by Williston Walker; and "The Religious Basis of World Reorganisation," by E. Hershey Sneath.

Christian Internationalism. By William Pierson Merrill. The Macmillan Company. G. $1.50.

Dr. Merrill, who is pastor of one of the leading Presbyterian churches in New York City, discusses in this volume some of the more vital religious problems suggested by and growing out of the war. Among his chapter headings are: "Constructive Proposals for an International Order," "Problems Confronting Internationalism," "Christian Principles Underlying Internationalism," "The War and Internationalism," and "The Church and Internationalism."

The Flaming Crucible. By Andre Fribourg. The Macmillan Company. G. $1.50.

A remarkable record of "The Faith of the Fighting Men," written by a French schoolmaster who served his country valiantly in the shock of battle.

THE DAY OF GLORY

The Day of Glory. By Dorothy Canfield. New York: Henry Holt and Co. G. $1.

It has been said that our generation will see no great "war book;" that the thing is too close, too terrible—it is impossible to get a perspective. But Miss Canfield, certainly approaches greatness in the simple little story, "On the Edge," the first of six sketches in "The Day of Glory." Jeanne, living from one mail to another—caring for the six hungry, noisy children, longing with every fiber of her being for the dear husband who is fighting—how real she seems to us! The details of their daily life bring home life in France during the war vividly before our eyes. We see Jeanne and the children shivering in the little kitchen for want of coal—we follow them to market and share Jeanne's despair at the prices, then to the baker's and the pitiful eagerness of the children for the bread which must be sparingly given. The mother's gay, brave selflessness brings quick tears to our hearts. Andre's visit home is naturally described. He would come just like that—the children would act just as Miss Canfield has portrayed them. Jeanne's fear that this wonderful interlude has been a hallucination shows how near the breaking point one can come. A masterly work of art is this little story: a bleeding, living cross-section of the heart of France in wartime.

Next is a sketch called "France's Fighting Woman Doctor," describing the experiences of an exceptionally able and heroic woman, who scorned difficulties and managed to get her job done, despite impossibilities. This is followed by a pastel in prose, "Lourdes"—very beautiful and very touching.

"Some Confused Impressions" is like a movie magazine, giving glimpses of the American soldier in France. "It Is Rather for Us to be Dedicated" is an eloquent plea that the fine young lives shall not have been given in vain. With enviable optimism Miss Canfield asks for a new and better world.

"The Day of Glory," the day the armistice was signed, is lived again and in France as we read our author's description. First the tears of joy—yes, even in America, every one, young and old, cried for pure joy when the first word came. And, then, the rush into the streets, a longing for their fellow-creatures. It is interesting to note the similarity of the way Paris and New York came into peace; Paris worn by suffering, and New York just beginning on her tour of pain.

GLENMORNAN

Glenmornan. By Patrick MacGill. New York: George H. Doran Company. G. $1.50.

A new Patrick MacGill, the publishers intimate; yes, and a new kind of Irish story. "Glenmornan" is as simple as the green grass of the glen, as simple and as natural. It charms and holds the reader by its very simplicity. One finds one's self wondering how much there may be that is autobiographical about this story of Doalty Gallagher; but there is so much more than Doalty in the book, after all. Every human being is as vivid as some living person met in the glens—and the reader knows them all, of course, far better than he could know "real people" met only casually. There is nothing casual about our acquaintance with these folks of Glenmornan. One knows them well, and is not likely to forget.

They are simple folk, these of the glen, that are neither of the village nor of the mountain. Unlike the mountain people, they can read, and like to look over "the paper," though they care little of what date "the paper" may be. But they are not modern and citified like the men and women of the village. They are very simple folk indeed.

So when Doalty Gallagher, eldest son of Maura The Rosses, goes away to London, and after writing bits of life as he sees it as a longshoreman, gets a position on the staff of a big daily and rises to no small success at twenty-three, the people of Glenmornan follow little except the fact of his success. When Doalty suddenly tires of his life in London and comes home to stay with his own people, they are surprised to find him as natural as themselves. They realise that Doalty is happy among them. And as for Doalty, it is scarcely his fault if, with all his contentment among his mother's people, his love for them, his young infatuation for beautiful Sheila Dermod, he sees constantly what "story" it all is, this life of the glen.

This is the kind of a "story" it is for us—not an exciting tale, but a human picture. And as such it is, for one reader at least, quite irresistible. How fascinating they all are, in this plain, straightforward picturing. Maura The Rosses, to begin with—they called her that because she lived in the glen of The Rosses before she married Connel Gallagher of Glenmornan—she is so thoroughly interesting, in her fineness and narrowness and ability. Then there is old Oiney Leahy, who worked so hard, and who "had spent so much of his time defending himself against censure, imaginary and otherwise, that he was utterly at a loss when confronted with words of praise." And there is the brave and dashing figure of Dennys the Drover, whom every one liked even when he had no money—"and this is good testimony to the worth of a man." There is old Grania Coolin of Stranameera, who had such strange adventures with the little people—though the young folk of Glenmornan exchanged significant smiles when she talked about them. There is bewitching little Eileen Kelly, who loved her parents well, but the boys better. And there is Sheila, so proud and so beautiful. There are all these and others, living in the glen on their farms—poor folk, hardworking folk all. And young Doalty Gallagher comes back to them after seven London years:

Doalty Gallagher, home from foreign parts, was sitting on the ground outside the door of his mother's house, his soul drinking in all the glory of the Irish nightfall. A bat, whirring in the air over his head, now and again swooped down and round him, almost touching his ear. He had come home that day at noon, and up till a few minutes ago, he had been inside the house speaking to the neighbors who had come to see him. He felt very happy. Everything in the glen and around him seemed beautiful and full of meaning.

The smell of the midden, the turf fire, and the rich grass was in his nostrils, and all this awoke pleasant remembrance in the young man. He got to his feet and walked along the field for a couple of hundred yards, then sat down again in the grass that was already getting wet with the dew. He bent his lips to the ground, kissed it, and looked round to see if any one had observed him. Nobody was nigh. "If they saw me they would think that I was a fool!" he laughed. "Wonder what mother would do if she saw me kiss Ireland? She would shake the holy water over me, I'm sure. And I saw the bottle of holy water today. Under the roof beam, just where it used to be seven years ago. And the bottle was once used for whiskey. The label is on it yet."

The air was pure and fresh, making him feel a little drowsy. He looked down the dip of the meadow and he could see the white streak of the glen road losing itself in the gloom. . . . How grand and great this day had been, he thought to himself. How dull and useless London seemed compared to this. The hills, the meadows, the turf smoke, the girl calling the cows in the braes, old Oiney—"I love them all," said the young man. "Tomorrow I'll go out to the bog and gather the turf. I'm so happy. It must be awful not to see the same people one day after another. It is Oiney. Here everything stands still. The table, the stool by the fire, the holy water bottle. All the same as when I left years ago. If I was away fifty years and came back there would be no change. The hills, the glen, the river, the thatched houses, the lamps getting lit in the evening, all, all the same. And old Oiney. What a fine story I could make about him. But that would be a sin."

There is a real story in "Glenmornan," a story that is very natural like the pictures of the people there. It is a book of charm and artistry.

AT THE RUSSIAN COURT

One Year At The Russian Court. By Renee Elton Maud. New York: The John Lane Company. G. $3.

Some one said of the old regime in France before the Revolution that no one who had not lived before the great upheaval could appreciate the full flavor of life. This book of Russian memoirs of the old regime, "the good old days," the author wistfully calls them, is written with something of the same nostalgia for a vanished time. Highly connected, (the author moved in the loftiest Court circles,) the book is a record of balls, fetes, tours of country houses, etc. Yet the American reader, however he may deplore the worst excesses of the present Bolshevist regime in Russia, will not be able to share the author's yearning for the return of the Tsarist rule. It was a society inured in selfishness, with something of the crudity attributed by Shaw in "The Great Catherine" to the barbaric customs of the Court of that great sovereign. Here is Miss Maud's account of a favorite pastime of the Grand Duke, the Tsar's own brother:

One of the favorite games of Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, the Tsar's brother and at that time his heir, was to place a potato in a pail of water, and then get his friends down on all fours to lean over the pail and with their mouths try to extract the wretched thing—usually with such results as might be imagined, some clumsy jaws sinking so deep into the water as almost to cause their owner's death by drowning, while the potato seemed to take pleasure in their discomfiture by rising and sinking at every touch to a most alarming degree.

In such ducal pastimes the author revels from one page to another. The book is a catalogue of royal personages, their habits, their conversation, their humors, (never very subtle or really amusing,) with a good deal of savory recounting of what Ibsen would call "truffles." Of the Russian revolution of 1905, the merest adumbation of the later one, there is little actual description. Speaking of the present revolution, the author says that the peasant could not be expected to die for a man like Kerensky, for instance, because he is not the "little Father." The author is constantly referring affectionately to the "little Father," to whose willful neglect was due the loss of millions of Russian soldiers and the undermining of the morale of his army. Miss Maud's comment on Tolstoy is, to say the least, amusing—"the works of Leon Tolstoy enchanted me; but for all that I did not like the man who had traced these talented lines." How much of an anachronism the book is can be gathered from the fact that the author curses Tolstoy ("may his ashes be agitated in his tomb," she says) because his works helped to foment revolution in Russia.

was also powder burned and displayed a bullet hole. He said that it was only the quick twist of his body which had prevented the bullet from hitting him. Following the shot Mr. Eddie and several patrons seized Golding and the witness finally got the revolver away form him and handed him over to a Sikh policeman. Afterward he went to Hongkew Police Station and handed the weapon over to the desk sergeant who examined it and found one cartridge exploded and the other chambers loaded.

Similar evidence was given by Mr. Eddie and a dining room boy gave evidence of the altercation in the upstairs dining room. He had served soup to the party, he said, when the difference arose and Golding picked up his plate and threw it at one of his companions. A boy employed in the offices of the defendant's firm testified that Golding came into the office about 9 p.m. Friday, going away after a few minutes. Other evidence was given by a bar boy at the Astor Grill and the case was adjourned until today.

England Also Has Its Negro Question

Is Anxious Now To Be Rid Of West African Laborers That Came In During The War

Washington, April 19.—England has a negro problem on her hands. During the war negro colonies were established in various English towns, all the men having been brought from West Africa. They went to England as seamen and, tempted by munition wages and the shortage of labor, settled down there.

Many of the negroes formed temporary alliances with white women. Although some of these alliances ended in marriage, there were clergymen who refused to assist in such unions. The police and social workers agreed that the conditions which have followed on the negro immigration are serious.

The negroes are natural dandies, and one has been seen to wear a bracelet, a chain and heavy locket round his neck, and a large silk handkerchief hanging from the back of his coat. They hold noisy carousals and the authorities have been obliged to borrow from America a word to describe the police squad assigned to the negro quarters. It is called the "Dixie Patrol."

Lately many of the negroes have been thrown out of work and have received the Government unemployment donation. They are now said to be anxious to return to Africa, but whits sailors refuse to work with them and ships officers will not sign them on. The whites are equally desirous that the negroes shall depart, and it is probable that the Colonial Office will grant them passage money.

Peking Union Medical College

Announcements for the Academic Year 1919-20

The work of the recorganized Peking Union Medical College is divided between two schools: the Medical School, which gives a four years' course in medicine and an additional optional year of special work in the laboratories or hospital; and the Premedical School, which offers a three years' course preparatory to admission to the Medical School. The Premedical School was opened in September 1917. The Medical School will admit its first class on October 1, 1919.

All instruction in both the Medical and the Premedical Schools, except courses in Chinese language and literature, is given in the English language.

THE MEDICAL SCHOOL

Requirements for Admission: The minimum requirements for admission to the Medical School are graduation from an approved middle school, or its equivalent, and the completion of not less than three years of college work. This must include satisfactory courses in biology, chemistry (including general, analytical, and organic), physics, English Chinese, and at least one other foreign language.

All candidates for admission, except graduates of the Premedical School, must pass satisfactory examinations in the subjects required for admission.

Curriculum: During the year 1919-20 only the subjects included in the first year of the medical course will be offered.

Graduate Courses and Research: Special courses in anatomy, physiology, and physiological chemistry will be offered during the year 1919-20 to graduates in medicine or other qualified persons. Visitors who desire to investigate special problems may be granted the use of the laboratories at the discretion of the Director.

THE PREMEDICAL SCHOOL

Requirements for Admission: Admission is by entrance examination only. To be eligible for the entrance examinations, a candidate must be a graduate of an approved middle school or its equivalent, and must possess a good working knowledge of English, both oral and witten.

Curriculum: The Premedical School offers a three-year course in the fundamental subjects which are prerequisite to the study of medicine, including mathematics, biology, chemistry, physics, Chinese, English, French, and German. Students who complete satisfactorily the work of the Premedical School are admitted to the Medical School without further examinations.

Advanced Standing: Admission with advanced standing will be granted to candidates who present suitable credentials showing the completion of one or more years of work of collegiate grade and who pass satisfactory examinations in the subjects for which credit is desired.

Calendar: The first semester opens September 23, 1919, and closes January 30, 1920; the second semester opens February 3, 1920, and closes June 16.

EXAMINATIONS

Examinations for admission to the first year of the Medical School and for admission to the Premedical School will be held at Peking and at Shanghai on June 9 to 13 and August 25 to 29, 1919. In case the number of applicants warrants it, examinations will be held at other centers. Applications for admission and requests for further information should be addressed to

AMERICAN SCHOOL NINE LOSES TO SHANGHAI 8-4

Youngsters Have Little Chance Against Locals; Teams Play Again Today

Shanghai had little trouble winning from the American School nine at the Race Course yesterday afternoon by an 8-4 score. The practice game gave Captain Bradley a chance to work out Hadley, Westaway and Smith in the box. Dumb base running lost the schoolboys several opportunities to score. In the eighth inning a pass and two doubles netted but a single tally. The teams will play again this afternoon at five o'clock.

Daily practice games are now planned and will serve to get the Shanghai nine into shape. The schoolboys will benefit by the workouts, too, as they have been unable to practice at Hongkew Park.

Scott With Locals

Scott, who pitched the Navy to a victory over Shanghai last Fourth of July, will soon be a full-fledged civilian in the employ of the Standard Oil Company here. Johnny was out warming up yesterday, he will be a valuable acquisition to the local team for in addition to his pitching ability and his general knowledge of the game, he is more or less intimately acquainted with the weaknesses of sundry sailor batters who will oppose Shanghai this season.

Sporting Life

The elaborate film version of "Sporting Life" the well known Drury Lane drama, was screened for local newspaper men at the Olympic Theater yesterday afternoon. The picture will be shown at the Olympic for four nights beginning Friday. There will be a matinee Sunday at 3:30 o'clock.

"Sporting Life" is in seven reels and the details of the production are its features. Scenes of the London Derby and the National Sporting Club are depicted and there are plenty of thrills in the seven parts.

American Interport Shoot

During May the annual rifle match was held between teams from the Hankow American Company and the American Company, S.V.C., the result being a win for the Hankow Company, with a total score of 2,247 against 2,191 made by the American Company, S.V.C.

Sergt. Haworth of the Hankow Company stands first with four possibles and 98 out of a possible 100 in the skirmish run, his total score being 291 out of a possible 300.

This match is the third of a series for the American Volunteer Interport Challange Shield, presented by Mr. G. R. Henkel. The shield is to become the property of the organisation to first register six wins in the annual competitions.

The course laid down is the U.S. Navy Sharpshooters' Course, which is an excellent test for the best rifle shots, as it includes not only slow fire, but also rapid fire and a skirmish run; firing being done in the prone, kneeling, sitting and standing positions.

The teams were of eight men, each firing 60 rounds, which makes an individual possible of 300, and a team possible of 2,400 points.

The scores:

Pond's Vanishing Cream

is based on one of the most valuable skin-softening substances ever discovered, a substance whose affinity for the skin is so great that the moment it is applied it "Vanishes" and never reappears, as do many other toilet preparations.

It is fragrant and refreshing, it imparts to the skin a delightful sensation of coolness and velvety smoothness.

A light touch of POND'S VANISHING CREAM before applying powder gives the complexion an exquisite texture and a soft velvety bloom which cannot be obtained with powder alone. It is the ideal finishing touch.

As a safeguard against the ill effects of sun, wind and weather, POND'S VANISHING CREAM is simply wonderful. It preserves the necessary skin pliancy, and in the case of sunburn, does much to prevent unsightly peeling.

We want you to know, not from what we say, but from actual experience, how good POND'S VANISHING CREAM is for your skin. You have read about it, heard about it; now we want you to use it.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO HAVE CHINESE FEAST TONIGHT

Literary Department To Hold Function At Cantonese Restaurant Following Meeting

Elaborate arrangements have been made for the Cantonese birthday feast to be given this evening by the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club and a menu has been prepared which should delight the most exacting of epicures.

The feast will begin at 7 p.m., following the 5 o'clock program of the Department at the Carlton, and guests may assemble at the Carlton at 6:30 or take a North Szechuen Road car—No. 2 or 12—to Tsungming Road, where the function takes place. Husbands and friends of Club members have been invited to attend and the dinner will be under the patronage of Judge and Mrs. Lobingier, Consul-General Sammons, Captain and Mrs. Lunt, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Squires and Dr. and Mrs. Hiltner. The arrangements for the feast were completed by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Chur. Chop sticks will be the accredited thing but spoons will be available for the inexpert or timid. Tickets for the feast may be secured at Messrs. Squires, Bingham and Co., and those intending to be present should secure their tickets early.

To be Members of the Order of the British Empire: Mrs. Ethel Stabb, Mrs. Alice Hickling, Mrs. Robert Sutherland, Mr. G. M. Young and Mr. J. A. E. Bullock, Chief Clerk, Colonial Secretariat.

China Political Notes From Chinese Press

Mr. Chang Jui-chi, the Area Demarcation Commissioner for Shensi, does not wish to return to Shensi. At an interview with Premier Chien Nung-hsun Tuesday, he declined the offer to head the relief commission in Shensi. Mr. Chien urged him to go and told him to sacrifice his personal comfort and consider the importance of government affairs.

In view of the appearance of a certain book entitled "Some Necessary Knowledge for Military Men," which is highly inciting, the Government has ordered the provinces to prohibit its circulation.

The Nanchang, Kiangsi, merchants have gone on strike. The Civil Governor, Mr. Chi Yang, has undertaken to see that no increase of salary for the Provincial Parliamentarians will be made and the police are urging the shopkeepers to reopen their business.

The Cabinet has telegraphed to Mr. Lu Chen-hsiang, the Chinese delegate to the Paris Conference, to inform the British Delegation that the relations between China and Great Britain in Tibet should be based on the terms of the Tibetan treaty concluded between the two countries, and should not exceed the limits mentioned in that document.

Tuchun Chang Tso-lin of Fengtien reports that the Japanese merchants in Mukden had a run on the Bank of Territorial Development because of the anti-Japanese movement launched by the provinces. The Cabinet has ordered its head office in Peking to remit a supply of cash to the Mukden office to relieve the crisis.

A Canton telegram says that General Tsen Chun-hsuan has telegraphed to General Lu Yung-hsian, the Defense Commissioner of Shanghai, to release Colonel Poo Tse-ming, recently convicted by the Mixed Court as an armed robber and handed over to the commissioner on the ground that he was a political offender.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Physicians Prescribe Castoria.

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: 1st, The indisputable evidence that it is harmless; 2nd, That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food; 3rd, It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for castor oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any opium, morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a medical journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—andour readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. guarantees genuine Castoria

"Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."
WILLIAM BELMONT, M. D.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."
H. J. TAFT, M. D.,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."
S. A. BUCHANAM, M. D.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

"I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."
R. E. ESKILDSON, M. D.,
Omaha, Neb.

"I take pleasure in recommending your Castoria, having recommended its use in many instances, and consider it the best laxative that could be used, especially for children."
NATHANIEL K. KING, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

Having during the past six years prescribed your Castora for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

NOTICE

In reference to the letter from the Tea Guild to the China Tea Association and the various foreign firms interested at Shanghai, notice is hereby given, that according to the methods practiced in the export business, the uncertainty of quality and price may be within the discretion of a buyer and the accuracy of weighing may be under the control of the seller; since the weight of export tea has been indefinitely been determined by customers without being based upon any recognised standard, and, consequently the same quantity of tea is often recorded differently by two foreign firms. As conditions are becoming worse as time goes on, we, without any attempt to fix prices beforehand, must determine some method to guarantee correct weight. As some foreign firms also experience much confusion and dissatisfaction, due to the fact that the weight in catties does not always correspond to those in pounds, we, after careful consideration in arriving at a fair and just plan, have decided to establish a branch office in Shanghai on June 5, 1919, specially to attend to this matter in the following manner:

Upon the arrival of tea in Shanghai, any two chests of each variety are, under the discretion of this office, taken and the net and gross weights are carefully ascertained by the most accurate and appropriate scales as generally used among merchants. The figures in pounds are then filled in on a form which will be given to the buyer. The buyer, of course, may compare the accuracy of the weights before the purchase is concluded. In case of inaccuracy an adjustment will at once be made, but every endeavour will be made to give absolutely correct weights. This plan, of course, refers only to business done by merchants whose standing has been recognised by the trade and with tea which has passed under our control.

Banking Service with AMERICA —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

Hankow Market

Hankow, May 28, 1919.

Finance and Money Market

Bills were offering fairly freely during the week, but the supply fell off on the 26th. There was also a small demand for freight in Sterling, Francs, and Yen, Taels T.T. on Shanghai. With money tight, and heavy drawings to pay for seeds on settling day, the 28th, rates fell to 96.7, some foreign banks even doing lower than that rate. Banks were importing from Shanghai fairly freely, but this did not seem to effect the market which still continues on the easy side, and below shipping point. 96.7 is being quoted in several places today, the 28th. Dollars remain firm at 71.1-71.3, buyers and sellers respectively. Interest: 12 percent, money being easy in native circles. Changsha exchange: 26.

Imports

Piece Goods.—The market is still very strong, especially for greys and whites, the latter particularly so in the better qualities, which are in very short supply. Dealers are still buying forward at steadily increasing rates. Deliveries good.

Yarn.—Prices are all up in sympathy with the advance in Sampin rates.

Exports

The demand from Europe for seeds and oils continues to be good, while for beans an easier market is reported. There have been numerous inquiries for cotton at steadily increasing prices. America is still a good buyer of hides, but owing to the advanced season this business is practically closed.

LANGKAT OUTPUT

The following telegraphic information has been received from the Sumatra Director and Manager of the Maatschappij tot Mijn-Bosch-en Landbouwexploitatie in Langkat.

The output for crude oil for the week ended June 1 was 268 tons and for the month of May, 1,184 tons net.

Karan Rubber Estate Pays 4 Percent

The ninth annual general meeting of the Karan Rubber Estate Company, Ltd., was held yesterdhy afternoon in the offices of the general managers, Messrs. A. R. Burkill and Sons, 2 Klukiang Road. Mr. A. W. Burkill occupied the chair and there were also present Mr. E. E. Parsons and Mr. Chun Bing-him, directors, and shareholders representing 2,575 shares.

The secretary having read the notice convening the meeting and the auditor's report, the chairman said:

"Gentlemen, the report and accounts having been in your hands for some time I will follow the usual course and take them as read.

"The result of the year's working is poor, but as the report shows the margin of profit on rubber was only 2d. per lb. while exchange was even more unfavorable than during the previous year. The securities have again been written down to their Tael value at the close of the year and when exchange returns to its normal level the shareholders will benefit by this safe policy.

"The output was 12,563 lbs. below the estimate, but as indicated in my speech last year it was decided to rest some of the older areas and 4,500 trees were omitted from the tapping round for a large portion of the year, and at the same time a more conservative method of tapping was adopted for the whole estate. The influenza epidemic affected the labor force, which further reduced the output.

"A glance at the balance sheet will show you that the financial position of the company is very strong. Sundry creditors amount to only some Tls. 3,000 as against which there is the sum of over Tls. 50,000 in cash and liquid assets, and under these circumstances the directors consider that a return to shareholders is fully justified. Buildings and plant are written down to nominal figures and it is proposed to write off new clearings, the expenditure on which will in future be charged entirely to revenue account.

"In spite of the reduced output the f.o.b. cost of rubber for the year under review was 1d. per lb. below that of the previous year and provided the estimates for the current year are reached a further reduction should be attained this year. The present prices ruling for rubber show a very fair margin over present costs and it does not appear likely that any heavy fall will occur as forward quotations to the end of 1920 are several cents per lb. over the spot rate.

"The working of the estate calls for no special comment, apart from the influenza epidemic there has been no cause for anxiety and everything has run smoothly and well. The benefits from thinning out are becoming more and more apparent and the young rubber on the old cocoanut areas is making excellent progress.

"No new buildings or machinery are estimated for during the current year; some alterations to the manager's bungalow and the usual repairs to buildings and machinery are all that need to be done.

"Mr. Hutchison has continued his excellent work as manager and the directors take this opportunity of expressing their appreciation of his services and of those of Mr. Kennedy, the visiting agent and Messrs. Kennedy and Co., the local agents in Penang.

"If any shareholders have any questions to ask, I shall be pleased to answer them."

No questions were asked and the following resolutions were put and passed:

That the report and accounts, together with the recommendation as to disposal of balance at credit of profit and loss account, be adopted.—Proposed by the chairman, seconded by Mr. Parsons.

That Mr. A. W. Burkill be re-elected a director of the company.—Proposed by Mr. Parsons, seconded Mr. Chun Bing-him.

That Mr. R. C. R. Fennel be re-elected auditor to the company.—Proposed by Mr. Loureiro, seconded by Mr. C. R. Burkill.

WHAT TO DO FOR MALARIA

In Malaria, as in most other troubles of life, it is the "weakest that go to the wall." The microbes of Malaria thrive and multiply with astonishing rapidity in watery blood; it is for this reason that anaemic, debilitated people develop ague and fever in malarious districts, while the red-blooded and robust remain perfectly immune.

To prevent Malaria, therefore, it is of the first importance that the blood should be kept rich and healthy. And to cure Malaria it is necessary to build up the blood, to provide it with a fresh supply of red corpuscles in place of those which the malarial microbes have destroyed, and thus to restore to it the power to repel and overcome the disease.

Formerly the only known treatment for Malaria was Quinine—a palliative and not a cure. But with the introduction of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this unsatisfactory state of things ceased to exist, as is proved by the evidence of the many former malaria sufferers whom this world-famous remedy has completely and permanently cured.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make the blood rich and red, drive the malarial germs from the system, and transform ague and fever victims into cheerful healthy men and women.

Dealers everywhere sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills; they are also obtainable from the China office of the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, 1 bottle for $1.50, 6 bottles for $8.00, post free.

More Foreign Advice To China

ACCORDING to a Tokio telegram, which is corroborated from private sources, the Diplomatic Corps in Peking is to present another note to the Peking government advising a reconciliation between the North and South. If there is any chance that that will accomplish anything, it is only to be commended. But unless it differs materially from similar advice tendered in the past it is difficult to see how it will. To be effective, foreign advice under existing conditions must be accompanied by either a specific program as a basis for unification or ill-concealed intimations as to what will happen if the advice is not accepted.

That may be interference with the internal affairs of China, it is true, but that and general notes of advice differ only in degree. And we have already seen that general notes are accepted piously and with every pretense of seriousness and pleasantly ignored. Let us either interfere effectively or allow China to settle its own affairs or leave them unsettled as it will.

The latter the Western Powers probably cannot do; the most patriotic of the Chinese probably do not want them to. Both the Western Powers and China have everything to lose by such a policy. The only ones who have anything to gain are the officials who are battening on the present chaos and those elements among the Japanese who are using it to get valuable assets for a song. If the other policy is to be followed then it must be more constructive than it has been in the past.

There is no use in giving advice without reference to the facts. What are the elements in the present deadlock, what is the method of its solution, which side will refuse to adopt that method, what pressure, if any, can be brought to bear on that side? Only by examining those questions honestly and answering them courageously can the Allies agree on a unified policy and carry it out. And concrete means must be devised for carrying it out. The new financial consortium reported to be organising in Paris offers such a means. Money is the foreign Powers' weapon. If the Peking militarists are the obstacle to peace, the Powers can quickly starve them into submission by first agreeing that financial help shall be given to China only by concerted action and then unifiedly refusing to give such help unless a reasonable government is established in Peking. And if the Southerners are the obstacle, they can be undermined morally as well as financially, for the Constitutionalist cause was at least originally a matter of a moral issue.

The time has come for the Allies to be concrete and specific. First, they must be unified, and steps must be taken to prevent "scabbing" against that union by any one Power. Second, they must frame some definite program to which they will give their support. Evasion and abstract advice are useless.

Turkey's Melancholy Days Of Peace

(Literary Digest)

Greek and Armenian demonstrations in Constantinople sadden some Turkish editors who bewail the fact that now their German masters are routed and the German system is on the scrapheap, the Turks are split up into so many factions that they are practically helpless before the serious situation that confronts them. Especial attention is given to the rejoicing of the Constantinople Greeks, who hoped and expected the city to be given to Greece at the Peace Conference, on the basis of the Twelfth Article of the peace program of President Wilson, according to which Ottoman sovereignty will be maintained solely in the "Turkish portions of the present Ottoman Empire." The Greeks say that the vilayet of Constantinople, comprising Stamboul, Pera, Skutari, and the suburbs as far as Tchataldja, has a total population of 1,173,670, of whom only 449,114 are Turks. We are reminded also that Constantinople, up to the time of the Turkish conquest, had for centuries been the capital of the Greek Empire, and before that time had been for several years a flourishing Greek colony. But even if the Society of Nations should decide to form an international state around Constantinople and on both sides of the Straits, which the Greeks believe possible, Greece would be very far from miserable, and hence the rejoicing of the Greek population in Contantinople, which is anything but musical to Moslem ears. One Turkish cabinet, that of Tewfik Pasha, which is described as of the "watchful-waiting" school, was lately thrust out of power by an avalanche of criticism. The cabinet of Jevid Pasha succeeds, and we are told that its members all belong to the new party of Liberty and Confidence. Jevid Pasha is really trying to do something especially in order to make the best possible showing for the Turks at Paris. But, we are told, it is very discouraging to the Turks in Constantinople who wish to conciliate Ottoman Greeks to see the Greeks unreservedly indulging in national demonstrations that "smack rather of Hellenism than of Ottoman loyalty." What is worse, the reaction of such public rejoicing is to start anew the hue and cry for "Turkey for the Turks," which, according to the Constantinople Tasviri Efkyar, has done so much harm in recent years. This daily continues:

"We are no longer surprised by such demonstrations on the part of the non-Moslem elements of our country. For months we have heard of these things and have even witnessed some such national expressions. The present demonstration is the culminating one. But what causes us surprise and anxiety is the apathy of the Turks, the Moslem element, the real proprietors of the country. It is for the Turks, the Moslems, to save the country, yet we can see the necessity of uniting as a single force in the face of the common calamity. Instead, personal jealousies, party ambitions, desires for office, which were stifled for ten years, now dominate all our thoughts and feelings.

"While the Peace Conference is coming to a final decision relative to the future of the great nation to which we belong, the Greek and Armenian communities among us are straining every nerve, striving in a thousand ways, now by means of ruffian bands, now by plotting against the tranquility of the city, to further their own interests. And all the time we Moslems appear indifferent to the grave dangers that threaten us. We indulge in personal and party recriminations, as though we were determined not to leave one able and valuable man in the Moslem element of the country.

"The present demonstration of the Greeks, their desire to dominate our capital, where we outnumber them two to one, and the efforts of Armenians to escape from subjection to our rule, ought effectually to rouse us Moslems from lethargy and unite us in toil and sacrifice for the preservation and security of our Ottoman country and nation."

After The Saloon---What?

American Plans For Reviving The Lost Beauty Of Leisure

By John Collier

(From N. Y. Post Magazine)

The golden moment has arrived for instituting a recreation enterprise which will meet the needs of young and old, of men and women, which genuinely will substitute for the saloon, which will reclaim the theater and moving picture show, and which will accomplish this revolution in leisure life not by philanthropy or at extravagant cost to the taxpayers, but by the method of self-support.

The present success of the Community Council movement in this and other cities is proof of this fundamental fact. Wealthy people may, through largess (and full credit to them for the necessary part which they do play) give to the toddling experiment a timely push, but after that beginning it must walk to success by its own powers of locomotion. The Community Council—perhaps the most democratic of all American institutions—depends mainly for support, when fully organised, upon the small fees paid by its members. Fundamentally, it is free and independent, subject to no higher control save the laws of the land and the common sense of the nation. In that fact lies hope of permanence.

In the era which is just dawning for a broadened, better, more joyous life for the people, through community recreational functions, "by" "of" and "for" are as fundamental as they are in the fabric and foundation of our Government.

In the new program certain elemental principles stand out.

First: The various types of recreation must be brought together in one place; loafing—idling, if you please—must be possible; the watching of drama or the hearing of music; active participation must be invited—participation in the competitive game, in the chorus, in the community theater. Such an all-round recreation enterprise will excel any of the existing specialised amusements in its attraction, will offer more at a greatly reduced cost, will pay its own way.

The second conception is the application of the methods of great corporations or of the co-operative societies of Europe, to the maintenance of whole systems of recreation enterprise. Circuits were needed—circuits like the lyceums provided for oratorical talent. One recreation house could not employ the greatest specialists, but fifty could readily do so. Fifty recreation houses could maintain their own film library, could maintain their own symphony orchestras and dramatic stock companies.

Now, in American cities, the time has come. The saloon must pass away immediately. Its competition would have been serious; now, with its demise, a powerful, economic demand is created for a saloon substitute.

It is significant that commercial interests, according to recent announcements, have been quick to grasp the golden opportunity of the passing of the saloon; I note that one moving picture agency has a plan for installing picture shows in hundreds of these vacated premises. Our "uplifters" might take a few lessons from the commercial book.

There are other favoring conditions. One is the immensely increased number of women who have gone into industry and business, who have felt their independence and have no idea of surrendering it. Another is the return of our soldiers from Europe. They have experienced fine recreation, both of the passive and of the active character. They have experienced that more genial air which even in war time was characteristic of France as compared with the nations of Puritanical tradition. No less than the men turned out of saloons, though in a momentously different way, our returned boys from Europe are already providing an economic demand for improved recreation.

A third favoring condition is the intensified interest in public affairs pervading all our folk. For years to come there will be things of giant import and of highly dramatic quality which everybody will be talking about.

There is another condition, vague and yet possibly more decisive than any, which makes the present the golden time. Through the war, through its excitement, its sacrifices, its great triumph, the whole American people have experienced a deepening of the emotional life, a widening of sympathies, a renewal of the romantic nature. We have been rendered more sociable, we have been given a taste of the greater life which is possible to all men, even the most commonplace men, in a social organisation which, by chance or through successful planning, provides for a quickened psychic pulse beat. This state of the popular mind will not last unless it be made use of. But at present it holds wide the door for great social enterprise, especially in the field of recreation and education.

The recreation enterprise of the future will be composite. It will permit of loafing and bonhomie just as the saloon does. It will provide for the shutting out of the women, if the men want it, and vice-versa. It will enable the father to escape from his family, but likewise it will make it attractive for him to be with his family. The ground floor, physically and figuratively speaking, of this recreation establishment will be devoted to casual interests, to loafing and talk and card playing and silent games, or to the music of antomatic pianos. Food and drinks will be served in this part of the establishment.

This recreation establishment will contain a theater, and in this theater the best of commercialised motion pictures will be shown. Likewise vaudeville will be given, and stock company performances. But in addition, there will be the means for participation by the people themselves in community drama which as the institution develops, will become a community drama conceived, written, built, staged, costumed, and acted by the people. This community drama will not be merely a talkfest. It will be a drama allowing for action of the body, for the display of color, for choral singing, for pantomime and dancing. It will be a synthetic theater.

Part of this recreation establishment will be a forum whose connection with the theater will be intimate. In this same recreation establishment will be meeting rooms for exclusive groups. There will be a dance hall, and it will not be too elevating in character.

In order that the picture here drawn may not seem merely Utopian, a few words must be said to overcome the prevailing fatalism of attitude which holds that men as we know them in America are, in their leisure life, all they were meant to be or can be.

That classical faux pas of Bateson, the great English eugenist, committed at the meeting of the British Academy for the Advancement of Science in 1914, should be made known to every one. Bateson argued that the British people were without a musical ear, which was proved by their lack of folk music. To get a musical ear they must cross-breed with certain Welsh strains, but principally with the Germans.

Bateson did not know, apparently, of the researches conducted by Cecil Sharpe, which proved that as late as 1730 England was probably richer in the folk dance and folk song—the plain people of England more continuously danced and sang—than Germany or Italy or Little Russia. Causes purely social had laid a blight on this flower of the English soul. Puritanism laid the blight, and the factory system and degradation of agriculture did the rest.

But does this example prove that a lost beauty of leisure life can be regained? Let us turn to the active sports. In five years after the American occupation of the Philippines baseball had become an indigenous Philippine institution.

I notice, too, that among the items on the credit side of the war ledger is the report that baseball is now spreading throughout Europe, as the result of a little missionary work by our boys in uniform. For many years the commercial interests back of baseball spent money lavishly in a vain effort to do this very thing—to popularise baseball in England. But that is the point, again, they only spent money. Our boys played the game.

The plain truth is, that our present leisure life is purely an expression of the dearth of social institutions, along with the failure to counteract certain ethical traditions Puritanical in kind, and with the further willingness to leave our people in a position where a quickening of the pulse, an unfreezing of the mental structure, could be secured only through alcohol.

Not in many generations, but in ten years, the leisure life, which means the conscious life, the spirit life, of the American people, could be made as interesting as the leisure life of ancient Athens was. Nothing but the application of social invention, of business enterprise, of corporate methods, of adequate capital, is needed to thus transform the mental life of our people. The time has come to do that thing.

The Desire

(From Scribner's Magazine)

I ask so little, as it seems to me;
Not love, all militant with golden deeds,
But just the filling of my smaller needs—
The silver of affection's alchemy.
Where look meets look assured of sympathy,
And tenderness the wish unspoken reads,
Where sorrow leans upon the heart that heeds
And joy laughs out in kinship with the free.
Oh, we might lift life like a brimming glass,
And pledge Fate standing that she lets us live.
If in the hands that touch us as we pass
One held our welfare thus superlative.
"Not Love," I say, unwitting, and alas,
I seek the things that love alone can give.

—Caroline Duer.

The Reforesting Of France

The all-important question of an adequate supply of timber in France is fully discussed by Paul Descombes in a recent number of La Revue de Paris.

Speaking of forest regeneration, the writer says it would be all the more fatal to delay that indispensable work, since even in peace times the French forests yielded less than half of the timber used in the industries of the country. France ought, then, first of all, to double its wood production. It is thus confronted by two problems: to double permanently the national output of timber; to procure for the next five years an annual supplement of six million cubic meters.

After the war—M. Descombes continues—France will be obliged to import annually over ten million cubic meters of lumber, a quantity representing more than a billion francs. Since it can obtain the greater part of that quantity in its colonies, it is of prime importance that it should utilise their resources, instead of purchasing lumber in foreign lands, and enhance by that much the value of its colonies.

Although colonial lumber—traffic in which was in great part monopolised by the port of Hamburg—has hitherto been imported in but small quantities, and that generally confined to rare species, men with foresight have turned their attention to developing that industry, without exhausting its source. Even before the war the Minister for the Colonies organised several forestry missions, while the Paris Society of Commercial Georgraphy published a study dealing with forest preservation in its bulletin of December, 1912; and the Government sent out, during the war, the Bertin mission to Africa, whose reports were summarised at a Congress of Civil Engineers by M. Gillet and M. Rouget. The object of the mission was to substitute in great measure colonial lumber for the ordinary lumber purchased abroad. It is, doubtless, a great undertaking to organise a vast exploitation which shall, on the resumption of labor, furnish ample materials; to familiarise the commercial world with these new products by circulating samples as rapidly as possible. And the mission has carefully studied all the details of the necessary steps, indicating the part to be taken by the government and by private initiative.

Certain portions of this organisation should be realised at once. No time should be lost in installing in every colony a forestry service, lest the French overseas dominions be exposed to the danger of excessive exploitation, such as in the beginning of the war—before the establishment of the military forestry service—ruined so many French forests.

It is generally estimated that the French colonies possess over a billion cubic meters of timber, so that if an annual exploitation of ten million cubic meters is accompanied by the requisite reforestation they will be able to maintain that figure for centuries to come. The importation on a large scale of timber from the colonies, indispensable for France to tide over the present critical period, will run no risk whatever of interruption when the forests of the mother-country shall furnish their normal output for industrial progress is always accompanied by an increase of timber consumption. In the United States it has doubled, per capita, in thirty years, in England in forty years, and a similar increase is taking place in France.

Another American Fortune Reverts To The People

With the death of Mrs. Russell Sage practically all the great fortune of her husband, estimated at not far from G.$100,000,000, has reverted to public use. Mrs. Sage leaves virtually her entire estate to philanthropy and education. The large use of American fortunes for educational purposes is nothing new in the United States; in this display of a public spirit our rich people show a much larger conscience than their counterparts in other countries. The Sage will calls attention to another fact which is usually overlooked by the popular declaimers against large fortunes. This is that great fortunes in the United States commonly remain intact for only a brief period; very few of them, indeed, outlast two or three generations. The Astor fortune is almost the only one that is a power today which loomed up as a "menace" in the days before the Civil War. If one should catalogue the names which, in 1850, spelled great fortunes—such as Aspinwall, Whitney, Stewart, Cooper, Haggerty—they would carry little meaning to the present generation. Even the great American fortunes of 1890—such as that of Russell Sage—are now rapidly undergoing disintegration. William H. Vanderbilt died in 1885, worth G.$200,000,000, the richest man of his time; yet his grandson, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who went down on the Lusitania, and who was the head of the family in his generation, did not leave a quarter of that sum. The Gould family are no longer railroad "magnates," and, though still rich, there is probably not one who possesses a third of the estate of the founder.

Great American fortunes may constitute a danger to the state, yet their tendency to subdivision is at least one redeeming feature. For this, thanks again must be extended to the wise gentlemen who laid the basis of American life. They left out of the American system that principle of primogeniture which had become so firmly established in Europe, and, as a consequence, no American can "found a family" by entailing all his property through countless generations to the oldest son. American millionaires, like Mrs. Sage, have also developed the habit of giving away large parts of their accumulations, sometimes all of them. Again, the fact that most American fortunes, unlike those of Europe, do not exist in the shape of land, but of industrial and transportation enterprises, necessarily tends to their disruption.—World's Work.

Eggs Instead Of Meat

By Loretto C. Lynch

In Springtime and early Summer the housewife casts about for foods to take the place of the heavy meat that has been finding place on her table during Winter. Eggs as the principal food at the meal will be found to be a pleasant chance. Yet how few housewives know all they should know about eggs and their cooking!

"You have had experience in cooking?" I asked a young woman who was taking a course in "invalid cookery."

"Oh, yes!" she replied, "I can cook eggs or anything simple, but it is the other, more difficult things that I wish to learn."

Yet this student could not prepare the simplest egg dish efficiently, not to mention attractively. There are, according to a physician whom I know, a few people in the world who cannot eat eggs without harm to their bodies. Eggs disagree with these folks to the extent of causing illness. They are, however, rare exceptions. And whenever I hear a person say, "Oh, I just detest eggs! They make me sick, oh! the very look of them," I know that this unfortunate has been served eggs in most unattractive form.

Eggs build and repair all the tissues of the body. Containing practically no waste, they are a cheap, economical food, prices of meat with its waste considered. A fresh egg will sink to the bottom when put into a vessel of cold water. With the advent of the parcel post, the city housewife is in a position to obtain fresh eggs direct from the farm with all undue expense eliminated.

Experiment has proven that an egg is more quickly digested if the albumen coagulates very slowly. Instead of boiling an egg for three minutes, try "soft-cooking" the egg. To do this, make ready a pint of boiling water in a small saucepan. When the water is at the boiling point, and not before, lower an egg into it gently on a spoon. Cover tightly and remove the saucepan to a wooden surface immediately. Allow it to stand exactly ten minutes by the clock. Remove the egg and break into a cup or drop on circles of toast. This egg will be found to be cooked evenly all through.

An egg that is boiled for three minutes has a hard white but a liquid yolk. And because it takes the albumen ten minutes to coagulate to a jelly-like consistency and because the temperature of the water is falling all the time, the soft-cooked egg is easier to digest.

Eggs are a concentrated food and should be eaten with some coarser food which will furnish the needed bulk to keep the little particles apart during the process of digestion and thus aid digestion. Toast is served with egg-dishes for this reason. Soft mashed potatoes are undesirable because of the lack of bulk.

Cut a cross in the skin of a hot, baked potato and scoop out a tablespoon or so of the interior. Drop a raw egg into the cavity and fold over the skin again. After a few minutes the egg will have set. When eggs are prepared in this manner the skin of the baked potato should also be eaten to furnish bulk.

One of the most attractive ways of serving eggs is in the form of "scrambled eggs." In a bowl beat slightly the required number of eggs. For each egg used allow one tablespoon of milk and one-eighth of a level teaspoon of salt. Melt a little butter or other fat in the upper part of the double boiler. Have boiling water in the bottom part. Pour the mixture in and, when the egg begins to coagulate, scramble through with a silver fork until it is jelly-like. Serve on a round plate. Garnish with small triangles of toast so placed as to form a star around the egg. In between the points of the star put tiny bits of curly parsley.

French omelet is delicious when properly made. Prepare the egg as for "scrambled eggs." Put a little fat in a clean, smooth frying pan. When it is hot pour the omelet in. The egg nearest the hot pan will coagulate first. Push this back gently from the edge of the pan and tilt the pan so that the uncooked part of the omelet will run onto the pan. When ready fold the omelet with a pancake turner and cook a moment longer. Serve at once.

French omelet gives the housewife an opportunity to use up small quantities of left-overs. A tablespoon of minced ham or bacon or peas or beans or chopped oyster or grated cheese or jelly may be spread on the omelet just before it is folded.

Warding Off Nervousness

By Brice Belden, M. D.

Nowadays we treat our insane humanely, and also those afflicted with grievous nervous diseases. In other words, among other things we place such patients in well appointed and efficiently conducted hospitals and homes. Cases which would in the olden times have wandered about, or been imprisoned for offenses brought about by their irresponsibility or incompetence, or been the clowns of their home communities, are nowadays taken proper care of.

Consequently our statistics make it appear that there has been an increase in mental and nervous disease, when as a matter of fact we are merely identifying and classifying conditions which were probably more common in the past, relatively, than in the present.

For if there is one thing certain, it is that as modern civilisation improves mental and nervous diseases tend to lessen.

Modern civilisation is controlling more and more the infectious diseases bad food, and bad living conditions, upon which the mental and nervous diseases chiefly depend.

The brain and nervous system seldom present disease which is not due to the introduction of poisons from without—such poisons as alcohol, the toxins of bacteria, etc. In proportion as civilisation advances we overcome these factors and the result is better mental and nervous health.

The idea that the high degree of mental and nervous activity incidental to modern life brings about an increase of mental and nervous disease is not sound. If one lives and works under good conditions, eats a sufficiency of good food properly prepared gets proper rest and does not poison himself, he does not have to worry about his brain and nervous system. The harder he works in such circumstances the better for him.

The fact is that the poorest and least highly civilised classes and races have much more nervous and mental disease than those who live under good conditions.

Reject the vices and evils of civilisation and avail yourself of its good points and you will easily win in the battle of life.

LUSITANIA MURDERS ARE TO BE AVENGED

Germans Involved In That Atrocity Must Face Trial Before Allied Tribunal

BERNSTORFF INVOLVED

Offenses Committed In America Previous To War Declaration Make Them Liable

Washington, May 4.—Under the decision reached by the peace conference at Paris to try the fugitive Kaiser for a supreme offense against international morality and the sanctity of treaties, and others guilty "of criminal acts against the nationals of one of the Allied and Associated Powers," it is anticipated that the sinking of the Lusitania will be investigated and responsibility for this infamy fixed.

By the same decision five Germans who were very much in the public eye in the days preceding America's entrance into the war may be brought to trial. The prevailing opinion in Washington is that they will be so tried.

These men are Count Johann von Bernstorff, formerly German Ambassador to the United States; Dr. Heinrich Albert, German financial agent in this country; Dr. Dernberg, formerly German Minister of Colonies, and Captains Boy-Ed and von Japen, Naval and Military Attaches respectively at the German Embassy.

Indictment Broadly Drawn

The decision which hangs like a blanket indictment against the German offenders against the laws of civilisation is so broadly drawn that it may cover any offense and any offender. Even the diplomatic immunity enjoyed by Ambassadors, it is thought in Washington, will not serve to protect Count von Bernstorff, since the offenses charged against him were abuses of his immunity. Under article three this significant statement is made: "Persons guilty of criminal acts against the nationals of one of the Allied and Associated Powers will be brought before the military tribunal of that power."

While the language indicates a disposition to confine the investigation to military offenses, the offenses charged against the Germans headed by Count von Bernstorff in this country were of a military character.

The fact that the German government is to be compelled to give up all papers bearing on the cases may go far toward establishing well-developed suspicion held in this country relative to this group and also may involve men in America who heretofore have gone free.

Von Tirpitz Also Affected

The Lusitania incident is not wholly an American one, although it is of particular interest in this country, for its destruction resulted in America's participation in the war.

The Lusitania steamed from America, she carried American passengers, many of whom were drowned, and Bernstorff participated to the extent of issuing a public warning against taking passage upon her. In any event, the great Powers will endeavor ardently to place responsibility for this act, and Admiral von Tirpitz, it is assumed, is the man aimed at. One time Chancellor von Bethman-Hollweg also may be involved in responsibility for this crime.

The charge against the group of Germans operating in America has been clearly indicated in the hearing before the Overman committee which investigated German plots in this country.

Many Offenses To Be Charged

Dr. Dernberg came to this country, it is understood, with a slush fund of G.$7,500,000, which he subsequently increased to G.$20,000,000 through contributions from German sympathisers in America. Dr. Albert was the disbursing agent of this fund, and the threads of the conspiracy invariably led to the German embassy at Washington. The activities of von Papen and Boy-Ed resulted in their summary recall at the request of the President.

Among the offenses charged against the Germans is the Canadian bridge conspiracy and the conspiracy to blow up the Welland Canal, in both of which the United States was made the base for operations against a friendly country. The country was filled with spies and conspirators, strikes and labor disturbances were fomented, munition plants were blown up and Americans killed and maimed.

Papers in the possession of the German government, if not already destroyed, also may show that the Germans were responsible for many other disasters in America, such as the explosion on Black Tom Island.

Not The Hand Of Law, But Its Fist For Him

Judge Ready To Fight Wife Beater, So Latter Quails And Promises To Be Good

New York, April 24.—"You'll have to work or fight," ruled Justice of the Peace Kendrick in Southampton when Frank Powanhaski, a powerful-looking farmhand, was charged with beating his wife, a frail woman with two children.

"Who'll I fight?" demanded Powanhaski, looking quite eager for the fray.

"Me," snapped Judge Kendrick, standing up behind his desk.

Then Powanhaski saw that the Judge also was powerfully built and six feet tall. The prisoner wilted.

"I'll work," he said. He also promised to pay his wife $7 a week and refrain from striking her.

"There ought to be a whipping-post for wife beaters," said Judge Kendrick. "If the village authorities will install one, I'll gladly act as official whipper, and I won't charge for my services. The exercise and satisfaction I get will be reward enough."

GENERAL WOOD'S BOOM FOR PRESIDENT GROWING

Pinchot Warns Old Guard To Nominate Man Who Can Be Elected

Washington, May 10.—The presidential boom of Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the central department of the army, with headquarters in Chicago, is beginning to assume considerable proportions.

Reports reaching Republican headquarters here are to the effect that General Wood is being seriously considered by progressive Republicans in many parts of the West and that conservative constituents are favorably disposed. Such reports have aroused much speculation on the possibility that General Wood is the leader who can harmonise both factions of the party.

Wood Sentiment Grows

Wood sentiment is reported particularly strong in the Middle West, notably Iowa, and in Missouri, Kansas and other Western States whose soldiers were trained under him at Camp Funston. In the East "Wood for President" organisations are being formed, and word comes from New Hampshire that the Republicans of that State plan to send a Wood delegation to the national convention.

In surveying sentiment in the Middle West the Republican leaders also have become aware of the popularity of Governor Lowden of Illinois, who is expected to have the indorsement of his own and a number of other States. A contest between Lowden and Wood for the bulk of the western delegates is believed to be foreshadowed by present indications.

Liked By Roosevelt Men

General Wood is acceptable to the vast majority of the Roosevelt followers in the party. In announcing today that he would be a candidate for delegate to the national convention from Pennsylvania, Gifford Pinchot, who helped to organise the Progressive party, said that he would stand for a platform in harmony with the policies and ideals of Theodore Roosevelt and support for the nomination "such a man as Henry Allen, Hiram Johnson, Irvine Lenroot, or Leonard Wood." He said he would oppose the nomination "of a reactionary like Senator Harding or Jim Watson."

Contrary to the prevalent belief that Mr. Wilson aspires to become "first president of the world," as head of the league of nations, Mr. Pinchot says:

"It is clear that Wilson plans to run again and that he will be a dangerous antagonist. The ground he has recovered since his slump last autumn is one more proof of that.

'Secretive And Domineering'

"Neither our position abroad nor our safety and welfare at home can wisely be intrusted to the domineering, secretive and reversible dictatorship of Woodrow Wilson. We cannot trust him, and we must defeat him—but we need a candidate and a platform that are genuinely progressive to do it.

"The country needs a Republican president next time. After the coming of peace, in the critical years of reconstruction just ahead, we shall have to face the most difficult readjustment at home and the keenest competition abroad that we have ever known. We can face them successfully only with the help of a Republican administration and Republican policies of government.

West Holds Power

"To get a Republican president and enact a Republican tariff, we must nominate a man who can be elected. To be elected the Republican candidate must be acceptable to the great mass of Republican voters. In particular, he must appeal to the independent Republicans of the West, who will decide the next election as they did the last. These men and women must be satisfied with the nomination before they will vote the ticket. We cannot win without them.

"Correspondence with Republicans systematically carried on for many months, and extended into every state and almost every county in America, shows me that the large majority of Republican voters are strongly progressive. They are entitled to, and they will demand, a candidate and a platform they can support without reservation or regret.

'Old Guard' Busy

"But from the day when Roosevelt died, the Old Guard leaders have been actively at work to nominate a man of their own kind. If they succeed, they will add a third Republican defeat to the two they have produced already. We are facing the same old question whether the nominee shall be openly chosen to win or shall be hand-picked by the Old Guard to keep them, win or lose, in control of the party organisation.

"The Old Guard calls for harmony. I am for harmony, but with the Republican voters rather than with the Republican bosses. Harmony headed toward defeat has little charm for me. Unless progressive Republicans are willing to see harmony made impossible and defeat made inevitable by the nomination of a reactionary candidate out of touch with the mass of our voters, they must take action, and take it soon."

LENGTH OF WEST FRONT HELD BY AMERICAN ARMY

Beginning With 1 Percent Of Whole Line, It was 21 Percent At Last

Washington, April 15.—Figures compiled by the General Staff of the army show that the American army in France was holding 21 percent of the battle front on November 11, 1918—the day of the armistice.

On that date the front measured 642 kilometers. Fifty-five percent of this front, or 354.75 kilometers, was held by French forces; 21 percent, or 134.25 kilometers, was held by the American forces; 18 percent, or 113 kilometers, was held by the British forces, and 6 percent or 40 kilometers, was held by the Belgian army.

On January 31, 1918, the front measured 754 kilometers. Then came the Hindenburg drive of March, which increased the length of the Western front until July 20, 1918, when it measured 856 kilometers. This was the maximum length of the front, and it was just as the effects of the great Allied joint drive began to show. By September the front had been shortened to 722 kilometers, and by November 11 to 642 kilometers.

The British held 25 percent of the front on January 1, or 187 kilometers, and held this length of front until March 21, when the Hindenburg drive opened. The British front, according to the figures, was at no time more than 180 kilometers after March 21. The French held 60 percent of the front on January 1 and only 55 percent on November 11. The maximum percentage of the front held by the French was on May 30, when they held 632.5 kilometers, or 75 percent of the front.

The American army held 1 percent of the front on January 31, 1918; 3 percent on February 28, 4 percent on March 21, 6 percent on April 10, 7 percent on May 10, 4 percent on May 20, 12 percent on June 10, 14 percent on July 30, 17 percent on August 10, 20 percent on August 30, 22 percent on September 10, 23 percent on October 10, and fell back to 21 percent on November 11.
